The 115th Corryong Show went off with a bang on Saturday with spectators coming from near and far to experience the Upper Murray on display.

There were pony rides, inflatable fun, sideshows, reptile demonstrations, motorbike demonstrations, face painting, markets and so much more for everyone to enjoy.

The fireworks are always a crowd favourite with this year being one of the most colourful displays yet.

Despite the threat of rain, attendance was one of the biggest to date. The showground was packed with families ready to enjoy all that was on offer. The pavillion was full of budding talent.

Some winners from the night were Leslie Tyrell who won a jar of yoyos from Corryong Cafè Brew. The winner of the $500 in the Cowpat Lotto went to number 98 which was purchased by Lauralee Hogg! The winner of Suglarloaf Creek Herefords 'Guess The Weight' went to

Solo student pursues her passion for science

A Corryong College student juggling her school studies, part time work and extra curricular activities has been rewarded with a $1500 grant from the Corryong Rotary Club.

At a recent Rotary meeting, Year 11 student Adelle McGrath spoke about her study program and the barriers she has faced while undertaking a science, technology, engineering, maths (STEM) program.

"I am the only student in my year studying Chemistry but I'm lucky enough to be able to join the Year 12 students so we can have a class with a face-to-face teacher," she said.

"This, however, also means that my time is divided between the two years in the class.

"I am also the only student in my year completing Physics but unfortunately there are not enough other students in Year 12 doing VCE Physics so there is no class at school.

"This means I have to study online and occasionally drive to Myrtleford - as it is my 'home school' due to the different school clusters - to participate in practical activities with the other students from my online class."

Adelle is also studying Biology, English, History and Maths as her other VCE subjects.

How she finds time for extra curricular activities and working two part time jobs is testament to her dedication.

Last year she won the ADF Future Innovators Award for her achievements in maths and science. She is also completing the Bronze Duke of Edinburgh Award and has First Aid qualifications and a Construction Induction White Card.

She recently participated in the 'Girls on Fire' fire safety and resilience course, during which she won a courage award.

"Corryong Rotary Club jumped at the opportunity to help Adelle fund her summer school at the National Youth Science Forum Year 12 Program," said Rotary secretary, Matt Spurgeon.

During the eight-day program students stay on campus at university colleges and are immersed in science and technology.

"The intensive science immersion will be invaluable for Adelle," Mr Spurgeon said, "not just in her learning but also in her networking amongst like-minded people her own age.

"Being able to help out Adelle certainly makes all the barbecues, chip frying and lugging those Rotary catering trailers all over the Upper Murray well worth it!"

Immerse yourself in our history

The Upper Murray Historical Society is celebrating History Month with a variety of activities.

President, John Murphy, wrote an informative article on Corryong's water supply in last week's issue (see page 5 for Part 2).

This Saturday the society is hosting a 'Locals' Day' at the museum. All residents of the Upper Murray are invited to visit The Man from Snowy River Museum that day (open from 10am to 4pm). There is free entry, activities for children, morning tea and many volunteers to show you the best of our history. The blacksmith will be operating and tours of the museum will run at 10am, 12pm and 2pm.

To finish 'History Month' the Corryong Cemetery tour will be held on Sunday 20th October, starting at 2pm, followed by afternoon tea.

A new sound system was recently purchased for the museum so the five people sharing their stories will come through loud and clear!

Investment in local communities continues

Snowy Hydro has kicked off round two of its 2024 Community Grants Program, with more than $200,000 of funding available to help local community groups bring their ideas to life.

With grants of up to $10,000 each, the program aims to support community-led initiatives that encourage growth and resilience in regional communities.

"Whether related to education, health, regional capacity building, or the environment, this funding is about creating lasting, positive change," said Snowy Hydro's Social Impact and Engagement Manager, Sarah Norris.

"Grants are available for community-led initiatives that align with Snowy Hydro's community commitment pillars of education and development, health and wellbeing, regional capacity building and environment.

"The program is about helping communities thrive and we are proud to support projects that create real opportunities and make a difference.

"The passion and creativity we've seen from past recipients have been truly inspiring, from grassroots initiatives that bring people together, to innovative programs that address regional challenges.

"It's more than just funding. It's about helping people turn their ideas into reality and contributing to a vibrant, resilient future for our region. We're thrilled to continue this journey with a new round of applicants and can't wait to see what ideas come through."

Earlier this year, the first round saw more than

Water supply took three decades to implement

Today marks exactly 100 years since the residents of Corryong were connected to reticulated (piped) or mains pressure water.

John Murphy continues his article on the trials and tribulations the town worked through before it got its own water supply.

The town's water needs were estimated at 80 gallons (360 litres) for every man, woman and child per day and 5000 gallons (22,000 litres) per day for trade purposes.

With this being the case, imagine the strain it put on the household tanks and wells at the time. Still, Thowgla Creek was being considered a viable option even though its flow was known to be distinctly inferior to Corryong Creek, the latter being measured at 15 million gallons (67 megalitres) a day. Corryong Creek was the first choice by most now involved in the project.

Other new developments and innovations also altered the plan, one of these being a mind-shift in the type of piping used. The idea of wooden pipes had been dispensed with, in favour of cast iron pipes but with the recent development of steel-reinforced concrete pipes and their success in South Australia, these were now considered the best option.

Also, their great advantage over cast iron pipes was that they could be manufactured locally from raw materials supplied from Melbourne but using local sand and gravels.

This option would result in saving a huge amount of money otherwise consumed by the railing and carting of heavy cast iron pipes from Melbourne to Corryong.

The other great advantage was that the manufacture of these pipes locally would create on-the-ground employment hence the money spent on wages would stay in the district.

As the Great War raged on in Europe more young men enlisted including Albert Barlett (a major champion of the scheme), who unfortunately died after the close of war in 1919 on his return to Melbourne. At this point he was seriously ill and never made it home to see the project he had put so much effort into come to fruition.

The war had caused huge upheavals and changes of focus and for the next few years, families had other priorities getting their lives back together.

However, through 1921, 1922 and 1923 the scheme was revisited many times with more minor adjustments. Finally, on the 13th of June 1923, the Corryong Waterworks Trust was gazetted, together with the Trust obtaining a State Government loan of £11,000 ($22,000) for capital works and the appointment of six commissioners - three from the Towong Shire as in Councillors Cronin, Hamilton and Paton and three citizens from the Corryong Riding as in Messrs A. Acocks, T.C. Davis and C.S. Hobbs. Work on the scheme commenced soon after and progressed favourably.

By late September 1924 the scheme was near completion with the source of supply made functional and six inch (15.2cm) diameter pipes being laid to the main concrete service basin about three kilometres from town. This was supplied from an off-take on Nariel Creek at the Public Reserve now known as the Colac Colac Camping Ground at a river level of 367 metres above sea level. The water was transferred a distance of nearly eleven kilometres by gravity to the main service basin with the same diameter pipes. This supplied a smaller concrete basin above Greenham Street at an elevation of 360 metres above sea level and with the business centre of Corryong being at 314 metres this allowed for plenty of pressure below.

Also, by this time most of the domestic houses within the town's limits had been piped and fire plugs installed.

On the 6th of October, 1924 the Corryong Water Works Trust held its final meeting prior to the official opening of the scheme where the committee decided to turn on the water without further delay. Only minor issues still needed to be resolved that would not affect service.

The turning on of supply occurred at 3pm on Friday the 10th of October at the corner of the old junior campus school with as many ratepayers as possible attending on relatively short notice.

The honour of turning the tap was given to long-term advocate and tireless worker for the scheme Mr Alfred Acocks.

At the completion of works on the ground the total loan supplied by the government amounted to £13,550 ($27,100), £2,550 ($5,100) above the original budget. Against the odds this comparatively small cost overrun was a credit to the hard work of those proponents of the project and apart from a number of major and minor upgrades, this scheme has served both Corryong and the butter factory well ever since.

From E.J. Brown's initial work in 1889, this scheme was 35 years in the making.

In conclusion, Corryong's water supply became the envy of many visitors to the town for its coolness and freshness and on this point, I would like to make a final comment totally out of left field. The water quality of both Corryong Creek and Thowgla Creek and all the minor creeks entering them, was analytically tested at intervals for turbidity, salt content, purity and colour. In the early 1900s the stream that won the accolade for best quality water was none other than.....Kangaroo Creek, Thowgla Valley.

Researched and compiled by John Murphy for the Upper Murray Historical Society -September 2024.

Light horse trail tells of heroic tales

Stories behind the General Sir Harry Chauvel Foundation's Border Chauvel Border Light Horse Trail

By Honor Auchinleck

"Why wasn't this done years ago? We need to get the Light Horse Trail into our schools," someone said as we delivered Chauvel Border Light Horse Trail brochures to the Visitor Information Centre in Gundagai. The initial responses to the trail have been a measure of how well it is being received.

On Gundagai's fine memorial is the name Sergeant Major G A Griffin, the first Australian killed in action in the Boer War. With a Lone Pine and the memorials in Anzac Park, Gundagai is central on the Light Horse Trail and in the Hilltops local government area.

The Hilltops district encompasses the heartland of rich light horse history with the First Light Horse Regiment and early recruits coming from the hinterlands of the twin towns of Harden- Murrumburrah. Harden-Murrumburrah have poignant memorials with Gundagai marking the point where the Chauvel Border Light Horse Trail turns south towards Adelong, Tumut, Tumbarumba and the border towns of the Upper Murray.

The Trail runs from the Light Horse Memorial in the New South Wales regional capital of Wagga Wagga to the statue of Brigadier Murray Bouchier CMG DSO in Victoria's regional capital of Shepparton. The trail follows the road winding through the hills and along the spectacular valleys of the foothills of The Great Dividing Range on the border of New South Wales and Victoria.

It passes through the apple orchards between Tumut and Batlow and the Tumbarumba vineyards. Perhaps one day someone will tell me about the descendants of light horsemen who work in the orchards and the vineyards. There might be some among them who ride in Tumbarumba's New Year's Day Rodeo.

The Southern Cloud Memorial at Maragle has one of the best High Country views, particularly when snow lies on the mountains in winter. It is from these mountains that some of the brumbies were mustered and sold as remounts for the Light Horse and the British Army in India.

Along the entire length of the trail there are still stories to be told.

Fine Boer War or South African war memorials in towns such as Gundagai, Tumut and Tumbarumba and in villages such as Cudgewa, remind us that the legacy of service to the nation had early beginnings.

Its roots gained strength among those who served in the Boer War in the Mounted Infantry Regiments, the forerunners of the Light Horse regiments.

The Border Light Horse Trail has had a long germination since the seed was sown in 2018. That year Corryong College teacher Stephen Learmonth and his Year 5 and 6 classes wrote and published to local acclaim, the biographies of 57 Upper Murray Light Horsemen.

Between Christmas and New Year 2019-20 the Black Summer bushfires devastated the Upper Murray before the pandemic locked everyone down.

Rainy days during lockdown saw the Border Light Horse Trail grow from maps and a collection of photographs of memorials. On the map, members of the Chauvel Foundation followed the routes of men who enlisted in the Light Horse and carried the independent, resilient and resourceful spirit of the bush to the First World War. During their service and on their return in 1919, these men contributed the Light Horse story to the spirit of Anzac which still burns strongly today.

A trail provided a fitting way to commemorate Light Horsemen from the border area who left home to serve their country and their communities. General Sir Harry Chauvel, who had commanded many Light Horsemen in the Desert Mounted Corps, said that he received honours and awards on behalf of the men who did the job. The trail is a memorial to these Light Horsemen and also to others serving on the Western Front and in other theatres of war.

Behind the trail are the stories and memories of those who contributed their service and returned home to work and contributed in their communities. There are also those who didn't return. Some of these stories can be found on the General Sir Harry Chauvel Foundation's website's Online Anthology. The anthology welcomes stories that have never been told before and as well as lesser known stories. Visit www.chauvelfoundation.org

Two former commanding officers of the 4th/19th Light Horse Regiment - Lieutenant Colonels John Boyce and Tony Stevens - have picked up the concept and developed it into a brochure for distribution to the Visitor Information Centres, newsagencies and local history museums along the trail. The foundation hopes that the Chauvel Border Light Horse Trail is the first of many.

In 2018 Stephen Learmonth and his students were not to know that they were sowing seeds for a wider, cross-generational educational initiative encouraging the preservation of history and linking like-minded people.

The Border Light Horse Trail links to a plethora of other trails, such as the Cudgewa Rail Trail and Snowy Valleys Sculpture Trail, thus providing a rich variety of experiences for visitors to the Victorian and New South Wales border and beyond.

Parts of the Silo Art

Trail are easily accessed from the Chauvel Border Light Horse Trail. Visit <https://www.australiansilohorsetrail.com>.

The trail seeks to highlight the historic fabric in local communities, demonstrating the role returned Light Horsemen have played in local, state and national government and the development of the agricultural and racing industries.

Born in 1859, just six years before General Sir Harry Chauvel, Major General James A K Mackay had been too old to serve in WWI. In the late 19th century he represented the electorate of Boroowa in the NSW legislative Assembly. After Federation in 1901, as one of Chauvel's predecessors, Major General Mackay went on to command the 1st Light Horse Brigade and supervised the re-organisation of the 3rd Light Horse Brigade in the first decade of the 20th century.

In September 2019 a memorial statue of Major General Mackay was unveiled in Harden-Murrumburrah, standing alongside the sculpture of war horse 'Bill the Bastard' by Carl Valerius. Memorialised in bronze by Paul Smits and Ewan Coates, Brigadier Sir Murray Bouchier is another Light Horseman who went on to serve his community in the political arena. Other Light Horsemen who turned to politics were Lieutenant Colonel Sir Michael Bruxner KBE, DSO, JP and Sir Wilfrid Kent Hughes KBE, MVO, MC; the latter being distinguished by service in both World Wars.

Perhaps the best-known First World War Light Horseman to serve in politics was Major General Sir Granville de Laune Ryrrie KCMG CB VD.

The foundation's online anthology also welcomes stories about Light Horsemen who went on to serve their communities in different capacities.

The foundation sees Light Horse Trails as highlighting and opening the door to the spirit of Anzac with its legacy of service, courage, bravery, mateship, resilience, resourcefulness and loyalty in regional communities. The aspiration is for those who follow the trails to travel through the countryside and towns from which the Light Horsemen came.

THE SOLDIER

General Sir Harry Chauvel was an outstanding military leader. He served in three wars over half a century and led the army in peacetime. He grew up in Tabulam in northern New South Wales. After initial service in South Africa, he commanded the 1st Light Horse Brigade at Gallipoli. A year later he led his Division across the Sinai to spectacular success at Romani, Rafa and Maghdaba. As commander of the entire Desert Mounted Corps, he is best known for the successful charge at Beersheba in 1917 and a year later for the triumphal capture of Damascus. On his return to Australia following the end of the First World War, Chauvel was appointed Inspector General and then Chief of the General Staff. In 1929, he was promoted to the rank of full General in appreciation of his distinguished career. With foresight of likely future conflict, Sir Harry strove to establish, preserve, and train the Australian Army as a peacetime force. He retired from the Army in 1930 and as a man who thought of others before himself.

he continued to serve the nation in a wide variety of involvements. At 75, he returned to service in WW2 as Inspector-in-Chief of all the Volunteer Defence Corps (Australia's 'Dad's Army').

THE FOUNDATION

The Chauvel Foundation is a not for profit Australian Charity. Its purpose is to promote, support and inspire service to community by building public awareness of the attributes, dedication and accomplishments of the Australian Light Horse and their greatest commander, General Sir Harry Chauvel.

Tourism gets a fresh charge

The foundation hopes that the trail will be a catalyst for some of the communities to bring to light the lesser-known stories of their forefathers who served as mounted troops

The Border Light Horse Trail provides opportunities for conversations and as a focus for local schools.

The trails will also engender a sense of wellbeing and to enable people to witness how talented commemorative artists and sculptors bring local history alive in a way where on occasions traditional education fails.

Most of the trail visitors will drive between the memorials. Others might ride bicycles along shorter stretches, for example along the rail trail between Cudgewa and Tallangatta. The Murray Valley Highway and the Rail Trail follow more or less the route along which the Remounts were brought from the Upper Murray. After the outbreak of WWI, men rode the same route to enlist in Tallangatta before catching the train to Melbourne.

As a measure of its ability to inspire, I understand experienced rider and Light Horse re-enactor Pat Leary and seven other horsemen plan to ride the 700km route of the Chauvel Border Trail beginning in Shepparton in March, 2025 (the 80th anniversary of General Sir Harry Chauvel's death) and finishing on April 16th (the 160th anniversary of Chauvel's birth) in Tallangatta. Rather than following stretches of the Hume freeway, the commemorative group plans to take some of the back roads, visiting some of the small towns and schools before rejoining the main trail.

Chauvel Foundation Ambassador, Dr Anne Flood in Wagga Wagga, is creating a Riverina Light Horse Trail.

There are possibilities for a trail beginning from the Shrine of Remembrance in Melbourne and for the Seymour district which includes Puckapunyal, now home to the Light Horse successor, the Royal Australian Armoured Corps. A Light Horse Trail in Canberra is under development.

While the Chauvel Border Trail has aspirations for its community impact, there is a limit to the number of memorials that can be included in a brochure. Those wanting to highlight other memorials and sites of Light Horse significance should contact the General Sir Harry Chauvel Foundation with stories and photographs. The foundation is keen to include these stories in its online anthology.

The Snowy Valleys region is set to become an even better destination for electric vehicle (EV) owners with the installation of ten public EV charging stations.

Snowy Hydro is supporting Snowy Valleys Council (SVC) to install and maintain the new charging stations which will be strategically located in Khancoban, Adelong, Talbingo, Tumbarumba and Tumut.

"Installing these EV chargers is a significant step forward in making the Snowy Valleys a welcoming destination for electric vehicle owners," said SVC Interim General Manager, Steven Pinnuck.

"We are pleased to be working together with Snowy Hydro leveraging our combined resources and expertise to deliver critical infrastructure that will benefit our residents and visitors alike," he said.

Snowy Hydro CEO, Dennis Barnes, said supporting the EV charging stations initiative with the council strengthened the company's ongoing commitment to local communities and the regional economy.

"Partnering with Snowy Valleys Council to install these EV charging stations is a tangible way we can contribute to a cleaner future," he said.

"By supporting the expansion of EV infrastructure, we're not only enhancing the convenience for electric vehicle owners but also fostering the region's appeal as a destination for both residents and visitors.

"As a company we are committed to sustainable growth in the communities where we operate. The new charging stations will play a crucial role in the region's transition to sustainable transport, ensuring that the Snowy Valleys region remains at the forefront of the shift towards a low-carbon future."

The new charging stations will be installed on council-managed land in Khancoban (Shopping Centre Carpark), Tumbarumba (Union Lane Carpark), Tumut (RHB Carpark), Adelong (Golden Gully Park) and Talbingo (Shopping Centre Carpark).

Corryong CBD Update

This week, works will continue on both sides of the main street, with Stage 4 (in front of Australia Post) focusing on the installation of tree vaults, electrical conduits, and downpipes, as well as preparing for the concrete pour.

Additionally, Stage 6 (in front of the Arcade) will focus on drainage pits and pipes, along with the installation of tree vaults and electrical conduits.

To ensure the safety of community members and site workers temporary fences will be installed around work areas.

Vouchers help cover kids' sports costs

The Victorian government is helping busy families with the cost of living and making sure more kids get the opportunity to play the sport they love, with another round of $200 sport vouchers on offer. Member for Northern Victoria, Jaclyn Symes announced the next round of the Get Active Kids Voucher Program is opening this week – helping eligible families cover the costs of sports memberships, registration fees, uniforms and equipment.

Eligible families who hold health care cards or other concession cards can apply for vouchers of up to $200 per child.

“Almost 150,000 vouchers have already been provided to families since the program launched in 2020 with thousands more to come from this upcoming round,” Ms Symes said.

“More than half of the families say their kids would not have been able to participate in sports without the voucher.”

Families can apply for the vouchers online before redeeming them at an activity provider like a local sporting club.

The program is open to kids aged up to 18 who are named on a Commonwealth Health Care Card or Pensioner Concession Card and named on a Medicare Card.

A special consideration stream is also available to support children in care, temporary or provisional visa holders, migrants and international students.

For more information and to apply for a voucher visit getactive.vic.gov.au/vouchers.

Quote attributable to Member for Northern Victoria Jaclyn Symes

“This program is helping thousands of kids to play the sports they love and addressing cost of living - this is a big win for families in Northern Victoria,” Ms Symes added.

The Ladies Triples tournament, sponsored by John Hossack Funeral Services and Corryong Pharmacy, was held on Tuesday and the victors were the Yackandandah team of Susie Hall, Annie Corcoran and Karen Glass.

An enjoyable lunch was catered for by the Corryong Lions Club.

The ever popular Business Bowls competition will start on Thursday 24th October with 16 teams nominating for the 2024-25 season (see season draw above).

Pennant starts this weekend - so it's all go!

TEE TO GREEN

Welaregang
 Little Kenny Lebner has become 'Mister Consistent' after carding another 33 points on Sunday, his third 30+ score in a row. Paul Land was runner-up with 28 in a small field.
 Round two of the Club Championships this Sunday should attract a bigger field and with four players within two points of each other, it will be a closely contested affair. Tee off is at 11am and visitors are most welcome.

Resgistration is now open for the next junior development program which will run on Fridays from 4.30pm to 5.30pm from October 18th to December 6th. Professional coaching and equipment will be provided. The program is limited to 12 participants and costs $40 (timely attendance at all sessions is expected).

Register via Golf Australia MyGolf at <https://www.golf.org.au/mygolf/home/> by Wednesday 16th October, 2024.
